LINK GETS 15 DAYS FOR FIRE

Prominent Realtor of Eagle
Rock Endangers City
with Weed Fire

STARTS BIG BLAZE

Thought He Had Extinguished
Town

Charged with setting fire to weeds without first having obtained a permit from the city, F. W. Link, prominent realtor of the east end, received a 15 day sentence to the county jail at the hands of Judge Cruzan of Eagle Rock, Monday morning, as the result of the fire which raged throughout the night in the hills near Eagle Rock.

Fully 200 volunteers and employees of the Southern California Edison company and the Los Angeles Railway companies fought the flames all day Sunday in an effort to hold the property loss to a minimum.

A high-power line of the Southern California Edison company was badly damaged, and repeatedly during the afternoon, the company's big transformer station in Eagle Rock canyon was threatened. Besides a crew of linemen replacing the section of line destroyed by the flames, the Edison company had fifty men clearing away the brush from about the Eagle Rock canyon station, starting early.

At first the fire approached within a mile of the Ammandale fire-fighters and spectators. Link claimed that he set fire to the weeds early Sunday morning, and that he was careful to see that the blaze was extinguished before he left for Van Nuys with his family to spend the day. After he left, fire broke out in the hill district.

It was thought for a time that the blaze of Eagle Rock would be caught in the conflagration, but the city fire fighters, led by Marshal Bramble, and men from the Edison company, succeeded in removing the danger.

The Skinson garage on Hill avenue was also endangered for a time, and frantic efforts were made to save it. The fire fighters were finally successful in extinguishing the blaze after a day of hazardous fighting.

Link stated this morning that although it was due to carelessness, perhaps, on his part, yet he felt that he was the victim of unfortunate circumstances, as he was confident when he left Eagle Rock that all the blaze had been extinguished. He stated that he was totally surprised to see that there had been a fire in the hills, and that he had not hesitated to state that he had set fire to the weeds on the lots, which he had planned on placing out of the market.

When his 15-day jail sentence was delivered Link was silent for a moment, and then asked if it would be possible for him to pay it out. Judge Cruzan refused, saying that Link had been a resident of Eagle Rock long enough to know that he should have a permit from the city.

TELEPHONE WIRES TO WHITE HOME ARE CUT

Believe Burglars Planned a Raid on Prominent Residence

What is thought to have been an attempt to rob the house of John Robert White, 347 North Orange street, was discovered Sunday morning. In the attempt the telephone wires leading to the house were cut some time during Saturday night or early Sunday morning. The belief is that the would-be thieves cut the wires so that when their proposed theft was discovered further delay would be caused by Mr. White having to hunt up an outside telephone in order to report the affair to the police.

For some unknown cause, the robbery was not put into effect. Possibly the thieves were afraid to carry out the job or were driven away. Newsboys who deliver papers in that section say they noticed two men tampering with the wires at about 4 o'clock yesterday morning.

STEAL AUTO CUSHION
Someone stole the cushion from the rear seat belonging to L. W. Sonata, 199 South Glendale avenue, Sunday evening while he was at dinner. Nothing has since been heard of the missing cushion.

J. O. C. CLASS CLOSES BEST CONVENTION

Seventeenth Annual Meeting
Said to Be Largest Attended of Any

HOSPITALITY HERE

Big Dinner at First Methodist Church Is Enjoyable Event

The seventeenth annual convention of the National J. O. C., which was held at the First Methodist church in this city and which closed Sunday afternoon, is said to have been the largest and most successful convention in many ways that the organization has ever enjoyed.

Officers were enthusiastic in their expressions of appreciation of the reception Glendale had given them and the comforts it had provided in the way of a roomy auditorium and a big banquet hall, where all the classes representing many districts were able to dine together, covers being laid for 450 with a pretty Halloween setting and with the fine service that only the First Methodist maids and matrons know how to give.

As a practical evidence of the convention's appreciation, two Glendale J. O. C.'s were elected to office, Mrs. Lydia Rehberg, president of the J. O. C. of the First Methodist church, being chosen for the second vice presidency, Mrs. W. C. Widows being made chorister.

There was considerable competition for the convention next year, Alhambra being first with an invitation, Burbank second, and the First Methodist of Los Angeles, third. An effort was made to throw the decision on the official board, but when that manner of settling the question was referred to the audience it voted no. Alhambra representatives insisted that, being first in the field, it should have the first opportunity to poll a vote and when the vote was taken it was practically unanimous in its favor.

The convention has been assembled, however, for things material but to gather spiritual inspiration and its message was addressed directly to those in attendance rather than to the world at large. The themes discussed were too intimate and sacred for ordinary newspaper reporting. It might be termed a sacrament of the spirit which was bread and wine to those who received it. When, as the convention closed, they were summoned to the altar they returned with eyes that shined but shining with the light of a new consecration.

J. O. C. is the symbol of a linking together, considered too precious for everyday gossip and so it hides its identity behind those three letters. The motto of the convention was "What would Jesus do?" and its theme "The Fruitful Life," was presented in many illuminating ways.

CHEVROLET HOME IS WARMED BY FRIENDS

Approximately 700 people attended the big celebration held at the local Chevrolet agency, Colorado and Orange, Saturday night, and all those who were present were very favorably impressed with the wonderful new building owned and occupied by this firm, and also amazed at the real class of the 1923 Chevrolet, which, at this opening, made its initial bow in Southern California.

The house-warming started promptly at 7 o'clock. Right on the dot the interested motorists and going-to-be-motorists began flocking in, and they continued to arrive until after 10 o'clock.

In the receiving line was C. L. Smith, owner of the agency, and Mrs. Smith, Harry W. Smith, manager, and a number of the salesmen. Everyone who called at the agency was made to feel that this was truly a "housewarming."

RECKLESS DRIVERS ARRESTED

H. F. Buckner and D. Leonardo of 1511 Niles street, Bakersfield, were arrested at the corner of San Fernando and Broadway, Glendale, by Officer McLean Sunday morning. The charge against them was reckless driving. They were examined by Dr. Marple, who pronounced them under the influence of liquor. They were locked up in Cell No. 1, pending their examination today.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Kitzels of South Pasadena, were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cave of 333 West Harvard street.

NOW IS TIME TO GET TOGETHER FOR A MARVELOUS GLENDALE

By JOHN H. GERIE
Civic Development Expert

The realtor is the advance agent of prosperity. When he comes in development begins. After him comes population, followed closely by commerce and a little way back by industry. He is a germ of a city in embryo.

The development and growth of Glendale has been largely due to the perspicacity and persistence of local realtors. This splendid little city because of its strategic location would have grown anyway, but had the realtor not come in, subdivided and improved large tracts of land, making space for new homes and attracting new residents to those homes, that growth would have been much less rapid and much less orderly.

The realtor has done more for this community than he is given credit for. He has done more than stake out home sites, sell lots and pocket the profits. He has converted waste spaces into residential areas, put in streets and curbs and walks, graded and sodded lawns, planted trees and flowers and otherwise beautified the city.

Then he has gone forth and cried to the world that here is the choicest home place in America, the Eureka of opportunity, the Elysium of tired souls. He has advertised the climate and the soil and the system of roads and the scenery and the proximity to the world's fastest growing metropolis and other attractive features with which this community is favored.

His campaign, well planned, well carried out, has achieved results. The ambitious and the unsettled and the people desiring change in all parts of the country have become interested, have written for information and many of them have come personally to look over Glendale and see whether it measures up to specifications. And a considerable percentage of those who came to see have remained to live.

As new population has come in new shops have been opened, bank deposits have increased, street traffic has grown and a great surge of activity has rolled over the city and surrounding district. Everybody is prosperous, everybody is optimistic and everybody ought to be happy.

And the end is not yet. In fact, according to all signs, the beginning has only begun. There is no boom, as that term generally is understood. But there is a movement and it is only just nicely getting under way. That movement is the transference of residence of a certain percentage, size still problematical, of American citizens from the shadowed belts of the east and middle west to the sunshine belt of California.

Realization seems to be spreading all over this country that it costs no more to live in Southern California in comfort all the year around than in other sections in discomfort most of the year. The appeal of flowers and fruits and fresh vegetables every day in the year as contrasted with extremes of heat and cold, coupled with storms and floods, coal bills and extra supplies of clothing, is too strong to be resisted by those in position to transfer their families and belongings to this wonderful edge of the Pacific.

Knowledge also that industries are fast springing up in the metropolitan area to give employment to thousands of skilled workers heretofore kept away because of lack of manufactures and that the vast potential trade of the Pacific already is knocking at the gate of the chief port city of the southwest, has strengthened confidence of people everywhere in the future of this great southland. Assurance of abundance of economical hydro-electric power with a consequent steady inflow of capital has put the finishing touches upon the national urge to find a home in marvelous Southern California.

Under these circumstances it is not surprising to hear predictions that millions soon will be headed this way and that within ten years the present population of all California may be doubled. The area of the state is estimated to be capable of supporting a population of 50,000,000 persons with room on the coast line for a New York, a Boston, a Philadelphia and a Baltimore and interior cities as large as Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City. This population may not come in the lifetime of any present resident of this state, but it is likely to be well on its way during the lives of most of us who are here today.

Those cities best prepared for the inrush will fare the best in quality and quantity of new population. With the realtor on the job with the same faithfulness as displayed in the past, Glendale need have no fear that home-sites will not be ready and waiting for all who select this splendid community for their permanent abiding place.

But the realtor cannot attend to the whole job alone, nor can the chamber of commerce be expected to shoulder all the burden of organizing for the future. Every individual citizen who wants to see this city grow and prosper in the right way should feel the duty incumbent upon him to give all possible assistance to the realtor and to the chamber in the great work immediately ahead of both. Now is the time to GET TOGETHER for the up-building of a wonderful Glendale.

BRANCH LIBRARY HAS ENTICING BOOKS

There is now an excellent opportunity at the branch library of Glendale to study the relation of religion and science.

In his book entitled "In His Image," William Jennings Bryan presents the view opposed to the theory of evolution, while Mr. Oliver Lodge, in "Man and the Universe," discusses the other side and in the three volumes of "The Outline of Science," edited by Prof. J. A. Thompson will be found the very latest word of the exact sciences in regard to evolution.

"The Mind in the Making," by Robinson, deals with social problems and the history of civilization in a very interesting way. "The Book of Jack London," in two volumes, by his wife, is written with a charm and frankness that makes delightful reading.

MONTROSE BANK IS DECLARED CERTAIN

Local Residents to Form
Corporation for Institution

Definite word was given out Friday evening at the meeting of the Montrose chamber of commerce that a new bank is a practically assured addition to the Montrose district.

Mr. Haskins, who is a banker of experience, has seen such an encouraging outlook for the proposition, that he has taken out a formal application for the new bank through Jonathan Dodge, superintendent of banks. A temporary location will be found for the bank, and plans for building are to be taken up at once.

The proposition calls for a company of stockholders among the local residents and a few outside financiers. Mr. Haskins will make his home in Montrose, having recently purchased a new home, where he now resides.

The proposition of a new bank was given the unanimous endorsement of the Montrose chamber of commerce. It is believed that the advent of the bank is but another indication of the progress Montrose is making.

The question of establishing a postoffice branch for Montrose is another assured measure, it was learned through the postoffice committee report. The work of establishing a branch postoffice will necessarily go through the regular channels, but assurance was given that the new office would materialize in a short time.

A report was heard from the building committee, and the report held the information that at the next meeting the committee would be ready to report on the plans for the new chamber of commerce building. It is thought probable that the building will cost in the neighborhood of $4,000. The report will be heard at the next regular meeting of the chamber, the first Friday in November.

TROOP LEADERS TO MEET AT TUJUNGA

What has been termed a "trip-snort" meeting of the troop leaders round table will be held tonight at Tujunga in the American Legion hall, and according to Chief Counsellor M. E. Hill, who has charge of the arrangements, it will be a meeting that every scout leader should attend.

All scout leaders from Burbank, Glendale and Eagle Rock will meet at the district scout office, 108 North Brand boulevard, Monday, where they will leave promptly at 7:30 and go by automobile to Tujunga. The La Cresenta leaders will be met by the caravan at the Community church on the state highway.

A tentative program has been outlined with subjects of special interest to scout men. One of the main subjects to be taken up will be the proposed troop achievement contest, which it is claimed will in-crease the membership of the district and do much to intensify and advance scouting to a keener and more efficient standing than it has ever held hitherto.

The speaker of the evening will be Judge Owen C. Emery, who will emphasize and explain why scouting needs the best men to be had for its leaders.

Following Mr. Emery's talk, the leaders will forget for a time being their dignity and will play several scout games.

As a fitting close to the meeting a fire will be lighted in the main moth fireplace and all lights will be turned out and in the glow of the campfire thus created the leaders will be real boys once more, roasting pedigreed hot dogs, eating cake and rolls and washing it down with hot coffee for which they will have the good-ladies of the American Legion to thank.

The important thing for all scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, troop committeemen, deputy scout commissioners and the scout commissioners to remember is to be there.

Daughters of Vets to Hold Special Meeting

An especially interesting program is being planned for Tuesday night by the Daughters of Veterans, to be given in the American Legion hall. Instead of a business meeting, this will be a social meeting open to all, free of charge.

Some of the well-known Glendonians who will appear on the program are Mayor Robinson, Mr. Harris, and singer Harry James, monologist. After the program refreshments and a social hour will be enjoyed.

A special invitation is extended to the American Legion, Sons of Veterans and their auxiliaries. It is hoped that a large crowd will come out.

Mrs. Queen Danner is in charge of the program.

THE WEATHER
Southern California: Tonight and Tuesday, fair.
Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair and warm tonight and Tuesday.

ELKS BEGIN THE FALL SEASON WITH BALL

Spacious Dance Floor Is Crowded with Great
Dancing Herd

About 250 Elks and their families enjoyed the first ball of the fall season, given Saturday night in their ballroom. This affair started the year off right, for it was wonderful from beginning to end and everyone had a glorious time.

The spacious ballroom was beautifully beyond description with its mass of delicate pink crepe paper and festoons of sage green, all corners of the room. The from daisers were covered with pink paper and cast a rosy glow.

Music for dancing was furnished by the Bode-Henning orchestra and was of the very best.

At the close of the evening, French pastry baskets were served with delicious ice cream. The ladies were presented with clever favors of memorabilia books of American eBauty linen embroidered in gold thread. These were in the shape of a lady's hat. The men were given tiny braided paper hats with a rubber to go under their chins. These added much to the jollity of the affair.

The next Elks' dance will be given November 25, Saturday evening, and will be their annual charity ball, open to the public. This is the only dance given during the year where the public is invited.

NEED OF PRAYER IS KEYNOTE OF J. O. C.

Prayer was the keynote of the J. O. C. convention held at the first Methodist church in this city and which closed Sunday afternoon. It was sounded at the first session in the devotional service led by Dr. Eva Kate Coffey, after the assembly had been called to order by the president, Miss Florence McPhee, and had been led in song by its chorister, Miss Caroline Lucy Judd.

"Prayer," she declared, "is the most vital thing in the world of Christians for they cannot live apart from prayer any more than man can live without breathing. We must pray and we should think more about what we pray for. This convention is for the purpose of renewing our spiritual life."

Mrs. Marian Milks Reeder, president emerita, then greeted the convention in a charming little speech.

Mrs. Barnhart of Alhambra sang very beautifully and a quartet of "Teen Age Girls" from Santa Monica sang "Beautiful City of God," and a ballad in a manner which won great applause.

Then the officers were introduced and reported on the year's work. The president explained the need of assistants to the first vice president and the second vice president in clerical and other material ways such as raising money. The delegates voted to create the offices named.

The "teen age classes," composed of young girls who are the wives of the J. O. C. reported, showing unselfish service in visiting the sick and unfortunate, raising money for charity, for the support of mission and orphan schools or toward church debts. The report of the national organizer, Mrs. Alice Oldham, who has been specializing in the "Teen Age Classes," showed that fifteen had been formally organized by her, the total number of chapters issued for "teen" and adult classes being 22 in churches of all denominations.

Following the banquet came the evening meeting in the church auditorium where Mrs. Lydia Rehberg, who was the efficient hostess in chief of the affair, though ably assisted by fellow class members, made the address of welcome on behalf of the class.

She referred to the great loss the class is sustaining in the departure of its leader, Mrs. Clyde Monroe (Christ) wife of the pastor, who has been transferred to a larger field of activity, and introduced Mrs. Crist, presenting to her and to the president, Miss McPhee, beautiful arm bouquets of chrysanthemums.

Dr. Crist then gave a word of greeting, saying: "We are glad to have these officers as our guests. My prayers, my hopes, my ambitions will be centered on the Glendale J. O. C."

Miss Caroline Lucy Judd responded, saying how happy it had been in accepting Glendale's hospitality and all the comforts provided. "Never," said she, "have we been served so quickly and easily, and never have we had better results," she said, "than this. We must have been gratifying to Mesdames Earl and Charles Starkey and the big corps of assistants who helped them in preparing and serving the great banquet and mid-day luncheon on Sunday, and also, pleasing to the community which so beautifully decorated the church in green and red flowers and ferns.

"There was a fine vocal solo, 'He That Dwelleth in the Secret Place of the Most High,' by Miss Lilla 'Watson' of Santa Monica, and a very satisfying address on 'The Fruitful Life,' by Mrs. William Price, who took the parable of the sower as her text.

"What the world needs today," she said, "is a new interpretation of the truth and a new application of old truth to make it more fruitful in our lives. The growth and fruitfulness of a seed depends upon the condition of the soil upon which it falls. The effect of truth upon the life depends upon the condition of the life into which it falls."

At the morning service, Dr. W. T. Gilliland of Los Angeles preached a most inspiring J. O. C. sermon and there was special music by the church choir and soloists. The closing session came at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon and was opened as were other sessions with a song service, led by Miss Judd, the retiring chorister.

Special music was supplied by the church choir and soloists, some thirty voices led by Mrs. E. P. Southworth. Mrs. William Cord Rordan sang a contralto solo with splendid dramatic effect, and Mrs. Robert E. Wall contributed a vocal solo.

Dr. Clyde Monroe Crist was in the audience and was imperatively called upon by the president for a few words of greeting. In responding he smilingly challenged the authority of the chairman to give orders to the superintendent of the San Diego district, but said he was accustomed to obedience to the J. O. C., that he had one in his own household. He then expressed regret that circumstances had been such that he had been unable to reach the J. O. C. person, though he considered it had been ordained by an over-ruling providence because Dr. Gilliland had so far surpassed what he would have been able to do. He voiced his deep respect for the J. O. C. and its work and promised his aid at all times.

The closing address was by the re-elected president, Miss Florence McPhee. Her theme was "The Christian Life," and it was a plea for a more satisfied life, a life of greater faith and trust in the promises of Jesus.

The convention closed with the call to the altar where prayers were offered, and then the benediction by the president.

Officers elected for the coming

PURE RELIGION IS UNIQUE SHOWER DESCRIBED BY FOR MISS GILLONS EDMONDS

At the Presbyterian church Sunday morning the pastor, Rev. W. E. Edmonds, preached from the text, "Pure Religion and Undenied before God and the Father is This: To Visit the Fatherless and Widows in Their Affliction, and to Keep Himself unspotted from the World."

So plain is this text that he who runs may read. There are religions that are not pure, and there is such a thing as being stained with the world. If you are going to commit yourself to a bogus, futile religion it will never carry you over. Don't you dare experiment in religions; Christianity is not one among other religions; anyone that does not have Christ in it is nothing. It is a vain word that "one religion is as good as another." The word religion means "to bind back" to God. Ours is the religion of the Cross and the Tomb. Folks say, "we're all going to the same place." No! A man may think he is right while going utterly wrong and headed toward hell.

Man was created in the likeness of God, but through sin we exiled ourselves. Genuine religion must bind the soul back. Religion is not a creed or liturgy. A creed is necessary—it is a statement of what you profess to believe. What you believe forms your creed. "I believe in the golden rule"—then that is your creed; or "my creed is the sermon on the mount." God does not care about your creed that way; these are no good as long as you do not believe on the Lord Jesus Christ as savior. What does your religion call for? Unless it includes a saving faith in Jesus Christ it is but sounding brass or tinkling cymbal.

Jesus sets forth two great hemispheres of religion. One is doing good, the other is being good. He puts the doing first for He says beneficence is the key to all character, and your religion shows bogus if you are not doing for some one else. You are a traitor to your Lord if you are not willing to do good. The doing and being go simultaneously.

was introduced as Miss Nellie White, niece of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Martin of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Goodwin of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Worley, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Tower, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Stamps, Mr. and Mrs. E. U. Emery and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Roberts.

JOLLY TWELVE HAS PROGRESSIVE PARTY
The Jolly Twelve entertained Friday night with a progressive dinner party, the affair being a surprise and in honor of those couples whose wedding anniversaries come in the same month, October 9, 17 and 22.

The entire evening's program was centered around "12" and the dinner and celebration began at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bolcourt, 1124 North Brand boulevard, where the first course of fruit cocktail was served. The color scheme of yellow and white was carried out, using chrysanthemums and daisies. The other three couples whose anniversaries did not occur this month were completely surprised when Mr. and Mrs. Bolcourt were united in a mock marriage, the minister being E. E. Haw.

Another surprise came when Mrs. W. A. Maxwell invited the guests to her home at 327 West Harvard, where she entertained the bridal party with a chicken picnic, her color scheme being yellow and red. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell were also united in a mock marriage by Mr. Bolcourt, who acted as minister.

The party next journeyed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Haw, 425 West Wilson avenue, where the last course was served, the decorations carrying out the Halloween motif. This course consisted of pumpkin, doughnuts and cider. The large dining table was covered with a basket made from a large yellow pumpkin and was filled with three kinds of fruit. Following the third course, Mr. and Mrs. Haw were married at a mock wedding. Mr. Maxwell performing the ceremony.

The biggest surprise of the evening came when the young lady who had acted as maid all through the dinner, and whom no one knew,

A very unique luncheon and kitchen shower was given Saturday by Mrs. C. W. Bachmann, and Mrs. Charles Foss of 831 East Windsor road in honor of Miss Aura Bartella Gillons, who will become the bride of Leonard Bachmann on Wednesday, October 25.

The beautiful autumn colors of red, yellow and brown were used in the decorations throughout the house. The shades were drawn and the chandeliers covered with red, rose shades which cast a rosy hue over the rooms. The long luncheon table was centered with a large bouquet of daisies in the autumn colors and at each place were bonbon baskets in red and brown crepe paper. The luncheon plates were set on large brown and red doilies and through the center of the table ran a columbine vine which nature had tinted in her most natural autumn colors.

Places were marked by clever place-cards in brown, on the back of which was printed a recipe, each one different. From over the top of the place-cards peeped a tiny negro mammy in her red bandana, carrying out the kitchen shaver idea. These were all made by Mrs. Foss, as were the new and clever place cards. At the close of the luncheon, the bride-to-be was presented with all of the place cards.

To assist in carrying out the color scheme and the kitchen shower idea, Mrs. Bachmann and Mrs. Foss surprised the guests by coming in dressed as negro mammys. They served the luncheon in these costumes and their identity was not made known until later.

During the afternoon, Miss Gillons was presented with a large basket filled with many beautiful and useful gifts for the kitchen. Everything possibly needed was found in the basket.

A delightful musical program was given, many of the guests participating. The first number was a violin solo by Miss Julia Robinson. "Three Lullabies—Negro, Japanese and Chinese," Mrs. Hulda Dietz sang "Dawn" by Curran. "I Love the Moon" by Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Zucca. Mrs. Hulda Dietz and Mrs. Spencer Robinson sang a vocal duet, "Calm is the Night." Mrs. George Melford sang "Macushla" by MacDonough and Miss Helen MacMullin played a piano solo. Other solos were rendered by Miss Aura Gillons, Mrs. Mountjoy and other guests. Mrs. Spencer Robinson was the accompanist.

In the evening several of the men came in and danced with the women. Covers for the luncheon were laid for 52 guests, including Miss Aura Gillons, her mother of honor, Mrs. Mildred Racine, and her two maids of honor, Miss Margaret Houston and Miss Margaret Ackland, and Miss Julia Robinson. Miss Jean Robinson, Miss Grundner, Mrs. Fern Ticho, Miss Helen MacMullin, Miss Brownie Roesch, Miss Volkman, Mrs. Francis Smith, Mrs. Lillian Bachmann, Mrs. Bell of New York city, Mrs. Charles Warner, Mrs. George Melford, Mrs. Rose Robertson of Los Angeles, Miss Rossi, Mrs. Mountjoy, Mrs. Julian, Mrs. Flood, Mrs. George Henry Gillons, Mrs. Schultz, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Volkman, Mrs. Hulda Dietz, Mrs. Harry Girard, Mrs. Spencer Robinson, Mrs. Kelker, Mrs. Maxine Miller, Miss Katie Girard, Miss Eleanor Julian, Mrs. Underwood, Mrs. John E. GLENDALE NEEDS CHRIST, SAYS REV. COLE

The subject of Rev. Clifford A. Cole's morning sermon at Central Christian church yesterday was "Glendale's Greatest Need." After reviewing the condition of the world today, with misery, want and murderous strife in many nations, vice and wantonness in others and in America the mad pursuit of wealth and pleasure, the speaker continued: "We in Glendale are not suffering with poverty with want, yet with social inequality, such as is found in some places, yet we have it. Yet there is self-righteousness, conceit, the greed of gold, love of pleasure and the glossing over of sin in some of our churches. There is jealousy, strife and back biting. All this is sin, which, when finished brings forth death. What we most need is not money, nor paved streets, nor fire equipment, better schools, more churches, more government buildings. What we need is a cure for sin.

"God will not permit hypocrisy, conceit and self-righteousness to go on unpunished. We need above all else, Christ—the cure for all sin. In Him and Him alone is the solution of social inequality, the antidote for poverty, the saving from sin."

"Then your task and mine is to bring Christ to the men, women and children of Glendale."

The evening sermon was on "This Day of Miracles." After reading the Bible narrative of Joshua commanding the sun to stand still, the pastor said that when God bled His mighty arm, all the forces of nature had to give way.

"But wonderful as this miracle seems there is going on around us today, on every hand, far mightier stand still, the pastor said, that when God bled His mighty arm, all the forces of nature had to give way."

Truths in Epigram

To persecute makes a faith hated, and is furthermore, no perfect witness of a perfect faith in him who persecutes.—Alfred Tennyson (1809-1892).

There are three sorts of egotists: those who live themselves and let others live; those who live themselves and don't let others live; and those who neither live themselves nor let others live.—Anonymous.

PROLONGING LIFE'S SPAN

The American Public Health association expresses an ambition to add twenty years to the present expectancy of life. It has set the period for this accomplishment at half a century. It is refreshing to observe thoughtful men, active and alert in their chosen field of activity, make such a prophecy. It seems so wholly sane when contrasted with the fads and fakes that so often raise a temporary hope. It consists pleasantly with the assertion of a group that each member is resolved to become a centenarian, or even pile years above a century. Recently a gathering in which the average age was about seventy, solemnly pledged to convene in the same hall seventy-five years hence. There is not a shadow of probability that at that time a single one of the hopeful will be alive. The theory that age is merely a state of mind is sadly impaired by visible exhibits.

Length of life has been augmented by the conquering of diseases that for untold time had baffled human skill. To this an increasing knowledge of the value of sanitation, and the methods of keeping clean, has contributed largely. The sick in certain instances are segregated. Infection is guarded against. Food values are understood as never before. Habitations are so arranged that drainage is perfect and ventilation affords pure air. In many of the trades once reckoned deadly there are appliances for protection of health. The tool grinder no longer breathes steel dust. The making of matches does not involve the poisoning of the operative. People have grown wise enough to understand the value of recreation. Outdoor play is encouraged at the public schools. Athletics take a stated proportion of the college student's time. Even the older folk play in the open.

The outlook for lengthening of the mortal span is excellent. It is not so, due to any sudden process, or any miracle. The explanation is that experience has taught wisdom, and research has augmented vastly the sum of human information.

"POLITICAL PRISONERS" AGAIN

An editor who advocates the pardoning of all so-called political prisoners in the United States, has advanced a statement that possibly he conceives to be an argument. As a matter of fact, it does not touch upon the cases at issue. The statement is that only four German war prisoners are left in French prisons now. These are men who had been convicted of serious crimes. It is assumed from this that the crimes were in no sense political, but involved violations of the penal code. Such violations are almost to be considered the concomitant of the presence of a large alien army.

In time of war an act performed in pursuance of military duty, albeit provocative of reprisal, may not be deemed a crime at all in the ordinary sense. It may not indicate moral obliquity. On the contrary, often it is due to an impulse of loyalty, and is undertaken from a sense of duty. The spy in an enemy country risks his life, for he knows the penalty that follows capture. At the same time, by upholders of the cause he represents, he is regarded as a patriot, and ultimately, perhaps as a martyr. Were a purely military offender in custody at the time of the declaration of peace, his status would be changed instantly. Ceasing to be a menace, the cause for punishing him would cease to be operative. It is easy to imagine the French opening the prison doors to German soldiers captured while hostilities continued. But what has all this to do with the American "political" prisoners? Nothing.

People in this country who virulently opposed the war measures, who sought to cripple conscription, who advocated rebellion against the government, were giving aid and comfort to the enemy. The offense of which they were guilty had all the color of treason. Subsidence of the war leaves them still inimical to the government, the foes of organized society, the would-be destroyers of the constitution. The only ground upon which they could ask clemency must be that of contrition. Judged from the quality of the persons gathering to insist upon their release, contrition is as far from possible from any emotion that the prisoners or their advocates entertain.

RETIREMENT OF LLOYD GEORGE

There will be endless predictions as to the course of England concerning the retirement of Lloyd George. Whatever may have been the thought of the British citizenry, to the world outside, there is a probability that George would stay in office until an expression of confidence, or of lack of confidence, had become of record through a general election. The premier did not deem it a wise course to stay and undergo the test. The government as an immediate necessity, will be formed on a basis known to be temporary, and designed to stand only until the general will may be revealed at the polls.

Lloyd George early in the war, as minister of munitions, displayed a wonderful executive power. Doubtless it was his ability, thus made known, that caused his elevation to the premiership during the most perilous period of England's career. His course in the war generally was regarded as admirable. Since the signing of the armistice many new issues had arisen. In relation to some of these the George diplomacy evidently had failed to please. Nevertheless, this was the diplomacy that averted another war. But it permitted the return of the Turk to Europe.

Concerning the devoted patriotism of Lloyd George no question ever has been formulated. He has been called a "political trimmer," and such a charge, even if confirmed, could not differentiate him from other statesmen of fine capacity and high attainment. It does not seem probable that his withdrawal from the premiership means his withdrawal from politics. Premier or not, Lloyd George will remain a force with which, whatever its leadership, the government in power will have to reckon.

After a woman has been married about so long she ceases to pay attention to rumors about men neglecting their wits.

You can't tell how much a girl knows by her looks, nor how hard she can stamp by the size of her Oxford.

There's nothing so meaningless as the kiss one woman bestows upon another—unless it is the expansive smile of the hotel clerk.

The average woman would rather marry a man to reform him than to be able to pose as a reformer of some kind.

A woman's wrap may not be warm on a cold day, but if it is becoming to her she doesn't care.

The Childishness of Crime

By DR. FRANK CRANE

One immature idea that most of us have harbored at some time or other is that to be a successful criminal requires a great mind. This idea has been fed by a good deal of the criminal literature which makes of the criminal a Superman.

Those, however, who have had practical experience with criminals know that, as a matter of fact, almost all of them are defective. In the first place, most criminals are physically diseased. In the second place, almost 100 per cent of them are mentally twisted and morally perverted.

No man goes into crime whose judgment is not weak, whose sense of values is not bad, and whose power of co-ordination is not imperfect.

Any one who will take the trouble to make a list of the crimes reported in the daily papers, and look them over will be struck by the ridiculous smallness of the prize for which the dangerous deeds were committed.

The instances of men who won great stakes by crime are as scarce as hens' teeth. The idea that great fortune, great place, and great privilege are gained by crookedness is simply an ignorant delusion.

Take the arch-criminals—that is to say, the great conquerors and would-be conquerors of the world—who are, of course, nothing less than plain murderers and gigantic hooligans, exterminating thousands of souls and destroying infinite property to please their inordinate vanity. The glamour of Napoleon is dissipated in time. His whole bombastic career ends in an anticlimax when, as Victor Hugo said, "God was bored with this man," and Mr. Wells gives us a picture of him ending his days in a lonely island of the sea, shooting birds and quarreling with an underbred gardener because he did not receive enough respect.

The wind-up of William Hohenzollern is quite as ridiculous. And the career of the lesser fry is even more tawdry and disgusting.

Crime is simply the eventuation of a weak will and a perverted vanity.

It is almost invariably accompanied in its grosser forms with alcoholism, drug taking, sex perversion, or some other filthy habit or passion that rots into human soul.

Those who look toward crime as toward liberty are mistaken. Crime is the most low and decency is pure nightmare.

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON

DISCUSSION CLUB

(John)

"A Reader," Lyndhurst, N. J.

"The Right Word" asks how many of its readers would say "No one but I was there." I for one would certainly not say it in that way. The construction is not good. The better way would be to make a complete statement, and then qualify it as necessary, by saying "No one was there but I . . . (was there)." This construction leaves no uncertainty or doubt in the reader's mind, and it is a very forcible expression of a fact, and I think, cannot be criticized upon grammatical grounds. P. S.: A questionable construction can certainly give rise to a lot of "learned" opinions, and usually does."

Mr. Nicholson: "No one was there but I was there" is an absurdity, for if "no one" was there, how could "I" have been there? So many persons do not realize that the word "but" can be used as a preposition equivalent to "except." A preposition is always followed by the objective case; as, no one except me; no one but (but is a preposition as here used) me. "No one but me was there" is correct. If the expression does not seem euphonious, then why not say "Only you and I were there," or "There was no one there but you and me?" "The Right Word" suggests substituting "many 'learned' opinions" for a "lot of 'learned' opinions."

E. L. D., Orange, N. J.: "Aren't you all wrong?" Instead of "No one but you and me know about it," shouldn't it be "No one but you and me knows about it." Strip the sentence of "but you and me" (meaning "except you and me") and you have—using your sentence—"No one knows about it." Of course the verb should agree with its subject "No one," and that being singular naturally demands "knows." If I am wrong please correct me."

Mr. Nicholson: You are right. However, this error appeared in a letter written "The Right Word" by a "Donald H. Kline." At that, Mr. Kline should not be blamed, as it is more than likely that it was a typographical error, the final s having been omitted by the printer. The last sentence of the article in question involved a similar construction written correctly, as, "The Right Word" asks how many of its readers would say: "No one but I was there." We want to be mutually helpful, so may I suggest you use great care in punctuation? You inadvertently omitted putting an interrogation point at the end of your second sentence, which is interrogative. A typographical error appeared in "The Right Word" Sept. 26. The title "Miss" was followed by a period.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

In the old days when some of us were children our elders might unthinkingly threaten us.

If we were not good the "bogie-man" would get us.

And that for a time perhaps frightened us into what was thought to be goodness.

But which was not goodness.

It was merely the restraint that fell upon, us through fear.

We were threatened with evil.

And so we were good.

Not because we wanted to be.

But because the fear of evil made us forego the delights of mischief.

And then again in the old days when we were older we were threatened with hell-fire.

That would get us if we were not good.

If we went fishing on Sunday.

If we failed in the rather rigid set of rules laid down by the hell-fire setters.

So some of us may have been good again.

Not that we loved fishing less.

But we feared hell-fire more.

The weakness of that kind of teaching was that when the bogie-man and the hell-fire went out of our beliefs, our prop of goodness broke and let us down off the stepladder of righteousness.

The method of teaching was wrong.

Bogie-man and hell-fire were all good enough while they lasted.

But they did not last.

And a little later along came the teacher who assured us that if we failed in our lessons failure would get us.

Failure and perhaps poverty and hunger and all of the pains and penalties of ignorance.

And then we got out into the world and we were assured that if we failed to come down to work promptly and please the Boss, the Boss would get us.

And so we put the Boss in the same category with the bogie-man and hell-fire and the other things.

Always a threat somewhere.

The promise of penalty.

And later on in the world the lawmakers met and proclaimed.

If we did not walk the straight line the law would get us.

And perhaps prison and the police.

And we had another shadow over us.

Bogie-man, hell-fire, ignorance, Boss, Police.

Gloomy enough.

And as the years crept along we were told by the statisticians and actuaries and others that old age would get us.

Old age with poverty and weakness and helplessness and all the attendant sorrows of senility.

So we were frightened into thrift sometimes to keep from being devoured by years and poverty.

And then we are gloomily assured sometimes that no matter what we do, the worms will get us.

So we travel along the way of life between bogie-men and worms.

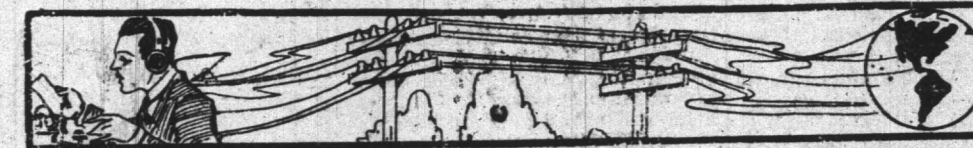

Always worrying for fear something will get us.

And as a matter of fact, most of the evils that get us are figments of our own belief and imagination.

We create most of our own spooks and goblins and skeletons.

When simple and natural living, and work for the love of it, and life for the joy of it will help Gladness to get us.

And after all, that is what we want.

Songs of the Poets

Song—By an Unknown Writer

Fain would I change that note
To which fond love hath charmed me,
Long, long to sing by rote,
Fancying that that harmed me:
Love is the perfect sum
Of all delight.
I have no other choice
Either for pen or voice
To sing or write.

O love, they wrong thee much
That say thy sweet is bitter
When thy rich fruit is such
As nothing can be sweeter.
Fair hope of joy and bliss
Where truest pleasure is,
I do adore thee:
I know thee what thou art,
I serve thee with my heart,
And fall before thee.

PROPER FOOD BEFORE BIRTH PREVENTS BAD TEETH

Blaming the lack of bone building elements in the average diet for the increasing prevalence of tooth decay among children in this country, Dr. Clarence J. Grieves, in an address before the American Child Hygiene association declared that this condition could be remedied by a liberal and well-balanced ration for the young and for their mothers before they are born.

Calcium and phosphorus are the principal bone and teeth building materials, and it is the absence of these substances to which he attributed the 25 per cent of decay found in the teeth of eighty-five per cent of the school children of this country.

Dr. Grieves placed especial emphasis on the importance of the diet of the expectant mother and of the child during the first seven years of its life.

The diet, nutrition, and metabolism of the mother must be seriously considered, he said, for the normal development of the jaws depend on the prenatal formation of the baby teeth. During the first seven years the child is learning to eat, and the part that the teeth will play in the nutrition and health of the individual is largely determined during this period. If the baby teeth become decayed, the permanent teeth are likely to come in wrong, eating be fattened, and gum diseases result. The cells of the tooth germ construct the best tissue they may from the available materials. However, not only must there be an ample supply of the calcium elements in the diet, but conditions in the blood and tissues must be such that the cells are able to use these necessary constituents of bone and teeth.

Dr. Grieves, while recognizing that the lack of vitamins may cause gum diseases, claimed that too much attention had been paid to vitamins to the neglect of the more important calcium and phosphorus.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

LENINE'S NEW JOB

(From the Cleveland Plain Dealer)
Lenine, practically recovered from his illness, has no official place as a member of the Bolshevik government. Moreover, it is reported that he will assume no post. Yet he will doubtless continue to act as unofficial dictator of Russia.

Instead of holding any official post or formally participating in the affairs of government Lenine now prefers to style himself "adviser to the Russian people." By thus standing out from under any direct responsibility the master Bolshevik is free to work just as he pleases. And he surrenders not an ounce of his power, for he remains the head of the Communist party, and as such he can make and unmake Lenine, for he is the idol of the element upon which the whole Soviet fabric depends for support.

Whatever his position it is well for Russia that Lenine is to continue in control. It would, of course, be better for Russia could Lenine and all Lenine stands for be swept into the bottomless pit. But as long as this cannot be done it is fortunate that a great genius like Lenine rather than any of the thin-brained fanatics who surround him is master of the realm. May the "people's adviser" continue to give good advice and to veer toward the right as consistently as he has in the recent past.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

It is said that certain women are to be wholly deprived of citizenship, owing to the combined workings of an American and a French law. In France a woman marrying an alien loses her citizenship, the assumption being that she will acquire the citizenship of her husband. According to an American regulation, the woman remains French, and if she has married an American, cannot be admitted to this country at all, save on such terms as apply to any immigrant. If such a provision exists it must be regarded as a legislative freak. The only thing to do with it would be to toss it into the discard with all possible speed.

The constitution guarantees a right to pursuit of happiness. Such beyond all dispute is the quest of the man who woos and wins a woman to be his wife. That he has the right to marry, argues that he has equal right to live with the wife. In fact, the general tendency of society is to encourage this association. To let a reputable citizen go abroad, there be married, and then to wrest him from his bride at the landing and pack her off to her native shore, would be a fool piece of business.

An American woman born in the United States chooses to marry a man born in another land, and not yet naturalized here. She becomes automatically, a Swede, a Dane, an Italian, as the case may be. This robs her of the political standing to which as a matter of justice she would be completely entitled. But if she is not recognized in the country of her husband's birth, she is reduced to a political cipher. How long will women endure a snubbing so stupidly administered and so undeserved?

It is interesting to observe the current newspaper statements concerning old days in California. The reason is not always that the statements are true. For example, one reminiscence sets forth that "Andy Lawrence, once with the San Francisco Examiner," was killed by leaping from a balloon at Honolulu. This will surprise Andy.

There has been much sympathy expended on Thomas W. Lawson because of his reputed entire loss of fortune. Out of the wreckage, however, Lawson is said to have pulled unharmed a $50,000 annuity. Of course, this is a small sum for him to play around with, and yet there are citizens reckoned well-to-do, who would regard it as a stupendous income.

Los Angeles authorities are said to have discovered an actual school for crime. No reference to the county jail is being made. The head of this school taught youths how to engage in foot-peddling and kindred industries, and then betrayed them to the police. Now the police have taken the instructor, and while not quite certain of what specific crimes he is guilty, feel assured at least, that he is no gentleman.

There is a lot of money behind the opponent of Congressman Lineberger. It is said to come from various and somewhat peculiar sources. Lineberger, however, is not depending on cash. He has a fine record to which to point, and this gives him an advantage that cannot be overcome.

Much as members of congress hope that the Bonus bill is buried, they might as well prepare to look the measure in the face. In that position they may tell what they think of it, if they have the courage. For or against? All side-stepping barred.

Herbert Wilson, lately returned after a break for liberty, is a very smooth person. Judged by the suavity of his conversation, it must have pained him deeply to bow to the necessity of robbing. And as for killing anybody, he cannot be imagined as ever having performed the operation without inward shudder.

The old, familiar, and unloved scheme of killing the initiative has bobbed up again. There ought to be a killing without fail, but it should apply to the scheme, and not the initiative. Asking the people of California to sacrifice some of their most valued possessions requires measureless nerve.

Doubtless the capture of the desperado Wilson and his pals was disappointing to the officers. The attitude of the officers was so meek at the climax that there was no excuse for killing them.

Rhode Island scribbles ought to quit writing about the recent murder of the minister and his choir leader. At this writing nobody knows who killed the pair, but everybody knows that, whoever did it did a good job. The present is an excellent time to forget the matter. Arizona has taken an affair somewhat similar in kind, and seems to have quite deliberately forgotten it, the most creditable course open.

WATCHING THE PARADE

BY JOHN PILGRIM

It's disloyal and I know it. But for all that I'm wondering whether my mother was as good a cook as I used to believe her to be. I have been young and now I am old. I have wandered over many countries and across salt seas. Yet this is the first time such a doubt has crossed my mind.

"Look back," says Mrs. Pilgrim—mentally and silently adding "you poor prune"—and you will discover that youth and appetite may your mother's food taste so good. As a matter of fact, she was just an average danger with the frying pan. Not so good and not so bad.

For some weeks we had been living in a small town on the border of a large lake, having what we are pleased to call a vacation. We boarded at what was locally known as a hotel, and for the first few days of my stay there I almost ate that hotel out of house and home. I still maintain against all comers that no better pie was ever baked than the toothsome encrustations that Daphne, the Yankee waitress who had renamed herself out of a novel, handed to me at two daily meals. At breakfast only we had doughnuts. We lived on fried fish and fried steak and fried eggs.

"Boy!" I used to remark to Mrs. P., joyfully. "Oh, Boy! But this is some food!"

Likewise other city folks like me said the same thing, only louder, and not in that refined and elegant manner that is one of the pleasing features of the underserved. They had been raised on farms and in small towns, too, and when they were young all their food was prepared in the frying pan. And fried food is good, and let no one gossamer meat, perit. Give me a good fried steak and fried potatoes and maybe a morsel of fried bread and a couple of fried eggs and perchance a soupcon, or even two soupcons full of nice hot, newly fried doughnuts to top off with, and the world can hold no greater gastronomic joys.

"Fate cannot harm me, I have dined today."

It merely happened, I maintain, that all of us fat, thick-blooded, heavy city folk came down heavily with all sorts of gastric disorders during the second week of our fried life, and we are all taking things now to recover from our vacation diet.

That was the way that Mother—bless her dear heart—used to cook. And I grew up, too.

PRISONER OF ZENDA' AT GLENDALE

Motion picture fans who look for exceptional photoplays will have an opportunity on Monday to see a picture which is one of the outstanding productions of the year, for on that date Rex Ingram's "The Prisoner of Zenda" will come to the Glendale theatre.

"The Prisoner of Zenda" is the most popular romance of a generation. From the time when Anthony Hope, then more interested in his political career in England than in writing, composed it, the narrative of Rudolf Rassendyll's reckless adventure has taken hold of the hearts of all who read. In the hands of a director such as Rex Ingram, who made "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" for the same motion picture producing organization, "The Prisoner of Zenda" has stepped out of the pages of the book and come very much to life on the screen.

EAT YOUR SPUDS AND SAVE WASTE OF CROP

That every man, woman and child in America will have to eat more than 3½ bushels of potatoes apiece each year, or feed them to stock, in order to save from waste the surplus of 53,000,000 bushels now raised, was explained by Dean E. C. Johnson of the college of agriculture at the state college of Washington in a talk at the Pullman commercial club dinner.

The present population of the country is 110,000,000; multiplying it by 3½, the average number of bushels of potatoes consumed annually by each person, gives 385,000,000 bushels needed to supply table demand. This year's crop, the U. S. department of agriculture says, is 438,000,000, which shows a large surplus.

"Potatoes cannot be carried over from year to year like wheat," said Dean Johnson. "As a result many potatoes will be left in the ground. According to the Idaho Director of Markets, Southern Idaho tried to ship potatoes to Chicago, and after paying the freight had 3 cents a hundred pounds left. If the Palouse farmers are to have markets for their potatoes, the commercial clubs and townspeople will have to help by buying home-grown spuds and eating more than they have been accustomed to. There are many lean people among you who could benefit by eating potatoes three times a day; and there are many women who would add to their already fine appearance by doing the same thing."

He urged careful grading of potatoes by the farmers, using only the best for market, cleaning them, and feeding the rest to dairy cattle and hogs. "When potatoes are boiled and fed to hogs they will replace corn at the rate of about four pounds to one pound of corn," he said. "A ration for a 100-lb. pig would be 2 to 2½ lbs. of corn or other grain and 8 or 9 pounds of potatoes a day, properly supplemented by 1-2 pound tankage or its equivalent. Potatoes may be fed to dairy cows if well washed and cut in small pieces. They should be fed not more than 25 lbs. a day, after milking, not before. They take the place of root crops or silage, not grain, so that the farmer who is feeding for milk production should feed grain in addition."

"Potatoes are selling wholesale in Pullman this week at 75 cents to $1 a bushel, and can be imported from irrigated sections at $17 a ton plus freight, making them about $1.13 for 100 lbs. in Pullman. The best Palouse potatoes are equal to the best from irrigated sections. They should not be dug before ripe, however, else they suffer by comparison. It would be to the advantage of irrigated sections this year, as well as to Palouse farmers, if they would ship to districts where they are less grown."

Every business house should handle home-grown potatoes. If consumers will not insist on imported potatoes, but ask for home-grown, it will help relieve the very serious economic pressure under which farmers here are laboring.

Government Experts Finding The Secrets of Preserving

The Enameled Ware Saucepan Becomes a Scientific Instrument.

UNCLE SAM and his nieces are replacing grandmother as the source of kitchen secrets. Time was when a good recipe for putting up fruits and vegetables was handed down from mother to daughter as a precious heirloom which was very important in any housewife's campaign for social recognition. There is nothing in her kitchen repertoire upon which a woman so prides herself as upon her jams, jellies, preserves and canned vegetables.

Grandmother, and her grandmother before her, who discovered or invented preserving methods, may have known all the little secret ways of jelly when it is jelling but they did not know why. Here are two of Uncle Sam's special chemist nieces finding out why. They are Dr. Nina C. Denton, assistant chief of the Office of Home Economics, and Mrs. E. Haines, junior chemist, working in the Department of Agriculture's laboratory at Washington. Dr. Denton is pouring a jelly syrup from an enameled ware saucepan through a straining cloth. From this laboratory come the new secrets of successful fruit preserving—hints that take the trouble and chance out of this way of saving money and assuring appetizing fruits out of season.

Housewives who have tried it know the good results they can get out of putting up fall fruits and vegetables. Plums, peaches, pears and grapes—all these the home canner can serve at winter meals if she puts them up now. Tomatoes, lima beans and corn will also be on her wholesome menu if she takes advantage of the low prices now. Preserving and canning are easy if you follow Uncle Sam's laboratory methods. An enameled ware outfit of a preserving kettle, a colander, a ladle, a skimmer and a long spoon are all that are really needed, although experienced preservers include enameled ware bowls, measuring cups, fruit jar funnels and "jar sterilizers" or canners. Enameled ware is used because of its smooth porcelain-like surface which is sanitary and easily cleaned and which does not affect and is not affected by the acids in the fruits. For a few cents the office of Home Economics will send you pamphlets giving complete information on the latest and best ways of preserving and canning.

JESUS, DIRECTOR OF OUR SERVICE DESCRIBED

"Jesus, Director of Our Service," was the subject of the discourse of Keith L. Brooks, before the men's Bible class at the city hall, Sunday. He said in part:

"It would seem that the four Gospels were brought to a fitting close by the marvelous story of the resurrection in the 20th chapter of John, and yet another chapter is added telling how the resurrected Christ came upon his disciples after they had had an unsuccessful night of fishing, directing them to let down their net upon the right side of the ship, and thus enabling them to bring in a great haul. The big catch of fish was a prophecy and pledge of that labor that should not be in vain when soon they should go forth to carry the message of salvation to the world."

"John tells us that Peter came dragging in a great net of fishes alone, after the other disciples had failed to get it to shore. Perhaps this is a case of that superhuman strength which comes to men sometimes under great excitement. I cannot but remind us of that special work that Peter did when he went out on the day of Pentecost to fish for men. Grieved by the mighty power of the Holy Spirit, he alone brought in 3,000 souls."

"In the first miraculous draught of fishes the net broke and many of the fishes never got to shore. This makes a good type of the visible church in which there are both real and nominal Christians.

"In John's story of the resurrected Christ, we are told that none of the fishes were lost, which would suggest the invisible or true church of Christ, made up of those within the nominal church who are born of God. The grace of God awaits to bring all such in safety to shore."

"It will be noted that when the disciples came to shore with the fish, Jesus already had a fire, with fish laid thereon. His first directions to them were that they should add their fish to those He already had, but where He got them we are not told. Those already there are suggestive of those saved under the old dispensation and to which will be added the many that are to be brought in the Gospel net. As they were bidden to bring of their fish to that meal, so the souls that we win for eternity will contribute to the feast of gladness at His coming."

"A striking lesson may be gotten from the account of how the resurrected Christ prepared breakfast for this bunch of hungry fishermen. They were wet, cold and tired. Their first thought would be for a place to get warm and dry and then something to eat. The risen Christ, with His heart full of the larger blessings He was going to bestow, and with much to say to them, had a thought for their stomachs. Whether in His incarnation, resurrection or second coming, He is always seen girded to serve others, and that in the most commonplace way. Let this be an object lesson for all Christians."

THE REFERENDUM

(EDITOR'S NOTE:—This column will be devoted to signed propaganda relating to the various measures on the state ballot in November and other matter of like nature. Responsibility for statements herein lies with the authors whose names are signed. The space is limited.)

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 18.—Twenty-seven heads of fire departments representing as many Southern California municipalities, are now on the State Fire Chief's Campaign Committee which is working to uphold the state housing act, passed unanimously by the last legislature, signed by Governor Stephens, and then opposed by referendum instigated by the wooden shingle interests of Oregon and Washington.

The fire chiefs campaign board now numbers more than eighty members, each representing a different city. Chief Short of Oakland is chairman of the body, and Chief Scott of Los Angeles, vice-chairman. The new members are:

D. W. Hasson, Anaheim; George Saborn, Coronado; H. F. Austin, Needles; Harry Nelson, Ontario; John O. Sherman, Pomona; A. H. Cooley, Santa Barbara; H. A. Johnson, Ventura; Charles A. Smith, Chula Vista; J. E. Morrell, Redondo Beach; Charles E. Everett, Longue.

Other members of the campaign committee previously chosen from Southern California are: W. E. Van Meter, Bakersfield; Henry Schilling, Beaumont; H. A. Dorsey, Claremont; G. H. Winnick, Culver City; C. F. Ferguson, El Centro; J. H. Spencer, Hemet; J. Tinsley, Huntington Beach; Scott J. Resley, Huntington Park; G. C. Craw, Long Beach; Ralph J. Scott, Los Angeles; S. S. Carvell, National City; E. F. Coop, Pasadena; J. F. Smith, South Pasadena; Joseph Schneider, Riverside; J. W. Thompson, San Fernando; John Louembourger, Santa Ana; S. T. Primmer, Santa Paula; J. L. Snavely, Watier.—California Housing and Building Association.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20.—Two of the biggest organizations of the kind in the country—the Los Angeles and San Francisco Realty Boards—have gone on record in favor of the State Housing act, passed unanimously by the last California legislature, signed by the governor, and opposed later by referendum. The bill is down on the November 7 election ballot as measure No. 5.

"Members of the Los Angeles Realty board investigated the housing act thoroughly before we acted on it," said President Frank Ryan of that organization, following the meeting at which the new law was endorsed. "We found that many statements made against the housing act were untrue, and that it was being misrepresented to the voters."

"Instead of raising building costs, as has been stated, the housing act will do much toward securing for our people a reduction of taxes, rents and fire insurance costs. It will permit of building activity not possible under the present law, and in every way seems to be a most helpful measure."

More than 95 of the fire chiefs of California are also actively engaged in seeking favorable action on the housing act. They declare it will do much to reduce the fire menace, and along with it the huge loss of life that is taken yearly by the flames.—California Housing and Building Association.

BONAR LAW IS NOW PREMIER OF ENGLAND

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Bonar Law succeeded Lloyd George as prime minister of Great Britain this evening.

Law formally announced to King George that he would accept the responsibility of heading the coalition of Lloyd George.

The outgoing premier visited his majesty to say farewell and turned over to his successor the seals of the office he has held for six years. This marked the end of the coalition government, which came into being during the war and which was sponsored by both liberals and unionists.

MODERN RELIGION IS ATTRACTING MANY MEN

"The reason modern religion attracts many men," said C. B. Elliott at the evening service at the First Baptist church of Glendale Sunday night, "is that the men these days feel their need of it. It is no longer a matter simply for the women and children. If we, as fathers and mothers, do not provide a Christian environment for our children, our little ones are going to suffer. They are going to have an uphill fight in life. Even with a Christian environment there are too many chances for our children to go astray. Unless we are living up to our religious convictions we cannot provide this Christian atmosphere. There is much difference between the life here and the life in heaven—a very great difference. We realize so much the need of Christian work in the world. Christ's death proves the great need. Men today are answering this need by work. Religious work appeals because it is a man's job. It is a big man's job."

The subject of the meeting last night was "Why Is Modern Religion More Attractive to Men?" Mr. Elliott talked on the subject. "By its name," J. L. Gray discussed the question from the "Because of its System" angle. He said in part: "God loves the church. If the church is to succeed, system must be used in its operation, just as it is used in any other business. What can be better than the working of Christian men together in the work for God's kingdom? Men who amount to something are coming out of the square for Christ. We must use system in every branch of our Christian work."

"In olden times religion was a matter of compulsion," said E. C. Boynton, when speaking on the subject, "The Success of Religion." "Anything that stands still cannot be a success. It will die of dry rot. It will go to pieces. The church must advance. It is progressing. If God's work is to be carried on we must be the ones to help it advance. I look for a new era in connection with the church as a result of the world war."

In discussing "The Satisfaction of Religion," Rev. E. E. Ford said: "There is no such thing as modern religion, but there is a new way of applying it. Religious work is the big job in the world today, and big men are becoming interested in it. No fly-by-night thing will satisfy the Tri Mu man—nothing but the real truth will suffice.

"The devil aims to deceive—he provides nearness to nearness. He is always providing something 'just as good,' and this something will damn a man's soul."

"The biggest satisfaction in the world is the knowledge of a task well done—something that has been put over and successfully completed. The scriptures tell us to show to prove thyself a workman who does not have to apologize to his conscience.

Editorials by the People

Editor Glendale Press

An article signed by J. K. Glickerson in your "Editorials by the People" column has prompted me to defend Federal Judge Bledsoe, though I realize the judge is fully capable of defending himself if he but knew of the several attacks made upon his character by the writer of the article.

I have not the honor of being a member of the Glendale Federated Brotherhood, but I was privileged to be present Tuesday evening when Judge Bledsoe addressed the 300 or more men assembled. The writer of the article says in his first paragraph: "That the United Brotherhood of the churches of Glendale should take care as to the speaker they select, or at least the subject upon which he speaks, was evidenced by the attitude of a large majority of those who attended the brotherhood banquet at the Christian church last night. Many were the expressions of disgust at the way Judge Bledsoe took unfair advantage of the situation."

If I remember correctly, the writer of that article endeavored to procure the floor immediately following Judge Bledsoe's speech. The chairman of the evening refused him the privilege, and rightly so, as otherwise a very wonderful evening might have ended in chaos. Judge Bledsoe made a remarkable talk and drove home the fact that no man or woman should need guidance as to how to vote on the Wright Law. He dwelt at some length on this proposition and I am sure he made a deep impression on his audience.

I wonder if your correspondent remembers the fact that Judge Bledsoe frequently admonished his audience that his opinions were purely personal and should be taken for just what they were worth.

I challenge any of your correspondent's professional brethren to game squarely, to live a good life and to please God.

"By and by the Master will say, 'You have played the game square, come home.'"

During the evening the men's chorus, composed of men of the Tri Mu class, sang several special numbers. William Bode, Glendale's leading saxophone artist, rendered two very pleasing numbers, accompanied by Herbert Henning on the piano. Willard Keath read the scripture lesson.

The morning discourse was delivered by Rev. E. E. Ford, pastor of the church.

made the direct assertion that Judge Bledsoe is a paid tool in the hands of the medical profession. Judge Bledsoe's reputation is beyond question and he is the most feared of all the judges in the federal court.

The audience of last Tuesday evening was one of the most intelligent I have ever seen in the many gatherings of that sort I have attended and I would deem it an insult to accuse them of not being able to decide for themselves as to whether they should vote for or against the measures discussed by the speaker.

And yet there was not one amongst them that did not deem it a privilege to listen to the opinion of a man like Judge Bledsoe. I personally heard the matter of the $500,000 bond proposition discussed in a way that set me to thinking, and I have since looked into it more fully and will vote accordingly to the dictates of my own conscience.

It is the same way with the other issues. I will use my own judgment, regardless of what Judge Bledsoe said, but I will look more fully into the matter before casting my vote.

Probably Judge Bledsoe had a similar experience to my own regarding chiropractors. In a city close by a singer was carrying his living in a moving picture house. His wife assisted in providing daily bread by working in a department store. The prospects looked none too bright for the singing game, so the singer decided to take up chiropractic and within an amazingly short space of time he was established in an office.

I was discussing the affair with a department store owner and was asked by him why I did not take up chiropractics. I believe the very fact that some people have the opinion that it is easy to become a chiropractor helps to cement the prejudice that exists to some extent.

Don't misunderstand me. I am not slamming chiropractors in general, because I have been benefited to some extent myself by the drugless treatment.

During the severe earthquake of some two years ago I had the misfortune to twist my hip in trying to save a swimming girl from sticking her head against an iron stanchion in a department store. I was advised to see a chiropractor and I must confess he fixed me up within a few days, though I'll swear I wouldn't have given a nickel for my chances of walking again while he was working over me. "Treat 'em rough," would be a good slogan. I will say this much for the chiropractors: "If they know their business they are O. K.—if they don't they are N. G."

But I would advise your correspondent to be careful regarding his statement of the attitude of the audience last Tuesday evening, because I saw with my own eyes the reception your correspondent got when he jumped upon a bench after being refused the floor by the chairman. Not half a dozen people listened to what he had to say. I could name the men whose attention he held and their attention was only held because they were so close to him they hated to hurt his feelings.

The foregoing picture shows one of the new buildings which form part of the half-million-dollar addition to this great institution for Glendale.

Our treatments are the same as used by the famous Battle Creek Sanitarium of Battle Creek, Michigan, and consist of diet, exercise, massage, electric light baths, salt glows, hot applications, hot and cold sprays, galvanic and sinusoidal electricity. The laboratories are equipped with fine X-ray machines with the latest stereoscopic improvements. Here the research work is also extensively carried on.

The efficient methods of treating the sick, combined with a scientific knowledge of the preparations and combinations of foods used in a vegetarian, or so-called non-flesh dietary, gives the patient a well-balanced course of treatment. The purpose of this work is to help nature restore health and put one in possession of knowledge that will help them know how to live to maintain health, for it is easier to lose than to regain.

Foley's Friendly Fancies

JAMES W. FOLEY

A GOOD FRIEND OF MINE
As fine an old fellow as ever you'll see,
And he wishes the top o' the morning to me;
His smile's like the dawn that comes over the hill,
And his handshake's a warm one, and done with a will.
He's up with the lark, he is eager and spry,
Though he has seen eighty odd years rolling by,
But the eyes of him lighten and sparkle and shine,
And the years rest upon him more lightly than mine.
He's the rarest old fellow,
The squarest old fellow,
The fairest old fellow,
This old friend of mine.

I rarely come down to my work and the day
But I meet him and greet him somewhere on his way:
He's a pat for my back, a good story to tell,
And a heart-warming way of just wishing me well.
If I'm fretful or gloomy, as once in a while,
He cheers me and helps me forget it and smile,
And my day is the better clear on to the end
For this jolly meeting with this good old friend.

The rarest old fellow,
The squarest old fellow,
The fairest old fellow,
This jolly old friend.

And he may have sad times, as ever must be,
But I would not know for he hides them from me;
And he may know tears, in his lonelier whites,
But somehow he's learned how to melt them in smiles.
He's mellow and friendly and cheerful and glad,
For the world and the blessings he tells me he's had,
And I hope when he reads this his kindly eyes shine
To know I suspect him—this old friend of mine.

The rarest old fellow,
The squarest old fellow,
The fairest old fellow,
This good friend of mine.

Babson's Letter

BABSON SEES BRANCH BANKS

WELLESLEY HILLS, MASS., Oct. 21.—There has been much discussion regarding branch banks at the annual convention of the American Bankers Association which was held last week in New York. Owing to the controversy which this discussion has developed, Roger W. Babson was today interviewed regarding the probable outcome.

"Of course the discussion is the natural outgrowth of the establishment of the Federal Reserve Banks. Before the days of the Federal Reserve system," says Mr. Babson, "a branch bank organization practically existed, although it was an unconscious and invisible organization. For instance, the small bank in Indiana took orders from its correspondent bank in Indianapolis, and the Indianapolis bank took its orders from a still bigger bank in New York. The heads of a few of the New York banks would hold a conference at the home of the late J. Pierpont Morgan or at the home of Mr. Baker of the First National Bank, and decide upon a policy. This policy they would pass along to the large banks of Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Indianapolis, St. Louis, New Orleans, and other large cities. The banks in these large cities. The banks in these same policy on to the small banks in their districts. There were no contracts or stock control existing between the banks, but there was an invisible control which was very powerful. With the organization of the Federal Reserve Banks, the clearance of checks at par, and the legislation against interlocking directorates, this control was given a tremendous jolt. No longer is it much of an object for a country bank to keep a deposit with the large city bank. Thus there has been a gradual drifting away on the part of the country banks from the city banks. The large cities have become more independent of New York; and the country banks have become more independent of the large cities. As long as the money rates were high, this did not worry the city banks, but during the past year, when money rates have been declining, the large city banks have distinctly felt the loss of their former power. Hence, they are looking around for some plan to get their country following back again.

"There is no hope of breaking up the Federal Reserve system which is functioning very satisfactorily. The men connected with the Federal Reserve Banks are active and ambitious. They are building permanent and substantial banking houses and are accumulating great resources. They are issuing reports and other publications which appeal greatly to the country banks. The larger city banks are distinctly worried about this and are looking for some other means for recouping their prestige. They first turned their attention to foreign trade organizations. 'Foreign Trade' was the key note at the American Bankers' Convention two years ago. The foreign trade business, however, has not panned out as well as the banks had hoped it would, and our recent tariff has given almost a death blow to what 'the new foreign trade' had. Thus, the banks, hopes in this regard are not very sanguine at the moment. Another attempt has shown itself in the organization of separate 'investment' companies and separate 'acceptance' companies. These have been organized by many of the larger banks and most of them are operating successfully. Banks are finding these investment companies more profitable at the moment than their foreign trade adventures. The business of gravely, that they can recover their influence with the country districts only with organization of branch banks. Hence, there is a drive at present to have the National Bank laws amended, so that a city bank can own a system of branch banks in the surrounding cities and towns. Whether or not this is in line with democracy, is a very debatable question; but the drive is on and my guess is that such branch banks are as inevitable as the chain store.

"All the banking systems of Europe are developed on the 'branch bank' basis. The big banks of England, France and Germany have their branches in hundreds of cities and towns. One of the finest branch systems in the world exists in Canada, just over the United States line. In Montreal there are several big banks, and each of these has from one hundred to three hundred branches in different Canadian cities and towns. As already stated, I doubt seriously whether the branch bank system is as good for the country as the present system. On the other hand we know that the present tendency of eliminating the small farmer and substituting the retailer in place of the owner is not for the good of the country. The development of chain store system are slowly crowding out the individual retailer is not good for the country.

"One Christmas Mr. Henry Ford sent me an autographed photograph on which he wrote these words: 'Eliminate absentee ownership and industrial problems will solve themselves.' He is correct in that absentee ownership is a present difficulty with our industrial organizations. As the chain store grows, a similar difficulty will develop which we do not now have with our individual retail system, and as a system of branch banks grows, there will be that same difficulty with our banking system. Yes, I believe these changes are inevitable. Branch banks will be established throughout the country, and congress will enact such legislation as is needed to make this possible.

"Mr. Babson was then asked what the effect of this would be on bank stocks and he replied that it should be a benefit to bank stocks. There are enough banks in the country districts at the present time. Hence, the city banks will be wise enough not to start new ones to serve as their branches. Instead the city banks will buy control of the better country banks. This will develop a new and active market for country bank stocks. Small banks in growing communities will be in special demand. Their stocks will surely sell higher. At the present time most bank stocks sell on 'book value' without any consideration of the value of goodwill. As soon as city banks bid against one another for the country banks, the 'goodwill' feature will at once be of value. With banks of small capital stock, this will at once be

POLICE PROTECT HER FROM BANDIT'S KISS

Miss Agnes Peterson

A few nights ago Agnes Peterson and her escort, J. Herschel Hardy of Chicago, were held up by bandits on a lonely road. One of the thugs attempted to kiss her, but her screams and the interference of her escort saved her. Then the bandit called her on the telephone and told her he did not mind not getting her diamond rings, but that he felt very keenly the loss of the kiss, which he assured her he intended to get. As a result a police escort is being furnished her.

come a valuable asset. Banks which have a small capital stock and banks which have a virtual monopoly of the banking interests in a community, will be in special demand. A community which has four banks will have these four banks purchased by four big city banks so that each of the four big city banks will have a branch in the smaller city. When, however, there is only one bank in the community the four big city banks will compete and bid against one another for the stock of this one bank. The stock of many of the small banks, which today can be bought around par, may later be purchased by some city bank at $200 to $250 a share. All the country banks need to do to bring about these conditions is to buy good securities, avoid risks, and to keep themselves in a strong position. The city banks will be willing to pay a good price for good will and will not especially care about immediate earning capacity; but they will want to be sure that the assets are sound and that the bank has not many lame ducks.

General business as reflected in the babsonchart continues to improve. Its present position—but 2 per cent. below normal. The highest point in two years.
